Hi Anvara team,

I found your Product Manager opening shortly after it was posted, and it felt a little too aligned with my experience to scroll past. Product, live events, and marketplaces are all things I genuinely love working on.

I co-founded 17 Bits Records, where I worked with independent artists and helped organize concerts. That inspired MusicConnect, an early marketplace concept connecting musicians and event organizers. It didn't launch, but it taught me how much opportunity can get lost in scattered conversations and disconnected networks.

Lately, I've been building software around problems I've seen firsthand. I helped shape SAVRON's booking and operations experience, including a bilingual AI voice concierge pilot, and I'm developing NxtSeat's voice-first tools for small businesses. Before that, I founded Fofo Labs and worked with a small team on campaigns, including one for La Estancia that reached around 540K views and 1,200+ new followers in its first month as a client of ours, which translated to +$32,000 in revenue.

Anvara is tackling exactly the kind of complicated, real-world problem I enjoy making simpler. I've also put together a small product exploration to show how I'd approach the marketplace. I'd love to share it and hear more about what you're building.

Thanks for reading,

Sergio Piñeros
